Sponsors Helping Sponsors

All sponsors know they are changing students' lives for "just over a dollar a day." But most sponsors don't know that school fees in Kenya have been steadily rising over the years. So why hasn't the sponsorship amount increased as well? Because some sponsors, like Matt and Amie Seegmiller, agree to fill in the gap. Their generous donation each year subsidizes sponsorships, so we can keep them affordable. Thank you, Matt & Amie, for your ongoing help making the Kenya Keys sponsorship program successful!

We are THRILLED to announce that we are sending a team of interns to Kenya this summer. Unlike in the past, part of the 2016 team will be traveling to a new area of Kenya. There, they will train others to duplicate successful Kenya Keys' programs. Stay tuned for more!

Before & After

Mariam Omar captured our hearts when she pled for help to receive an education. Without education, she told us, she would be forced to live "a dog's life." The Kenya Keys' intern who filmed that video was Paige Sparks, and she agreed right then to sponsor Mariam. They have been sisters since that day, despite the miles that separate them. Four years later, Mariam has completed secondary school and is eager to go on to college. Click on this link to read their full story and watch videos of Mariam then and now.

More than a Slogan

When we tell people that they can "change a student's life for just over a dollar a day," we mean it. Even the potential for a Kenya Keys' sponsorship is changing the way primary students in Kenya approach their schooling. They are driven to improve and obtain the highest possible scores so they can qualify for a sponsorship. You'll see evidence of that in the stories of Maria and James, two of the many students for whom we are currently seeking sponsors. Click here to read their stories.
